CHEF KARL ZENK AT PROVISIONS MARKET HALL

PROVISIONS MARKET HALL ADDS PRODUCE TO 5TH STREET MARKET

BY CLAIRE RISCHIOTTO

Provisions Market Hall, located within the 5th Street Public Market, offers a nearby option for downtown Eugeneans to shop for meals, where once there were limited grocery store options, says Karl Zenk, executive chef for Provisions.

“I used to live on 2nd and Pearl, just up the street, and this area was a real food desert,” Zenk says. “So this is really a great resource for all the people who live around here.”

In 2006, Stephanie Pearl Kimmel opened Marché Provisions, which offered items such as retail food, a bakery, wine and specialty foods. Last September, Kimmel, the founding chef and CEO, and the Marché Restaurant Group opened Provisions Market Hall as an expanded and re-envisioned version of Marché Provisions.

Today, Provisions Market Hall offers the same amenities as Marché Provisions, along with new additions such as a butcher shop, fishmonger, a produce section, prepared foods and professional cookware. Provisions Market Hall also offers customers the option of purchasing ingredients to make Marché Restaurant meals at home. Kimmel also owns Provisions Market Hall.

At the market hall, there is a core philosophy: buy from local farmers and sell seasonal produce. Across from the wine bar is the newly added meat and fish case, which features a range of items from tuna, mussels and oysters to lamb sausage, all indicated by a large yellow-and-orange neon sign that reads “Eat Real Food.”

Karl Zenk says he wanted to work at Provisions as a chef because of these food practices: “I love the philosophy of the cooking. I like the ingredient-driven cuisine that we’re doing here with a definite French twist.”

Zenk explains that at Provisions Market Hall, items are purchased locally from farms and from vendors, such as Newman’s Fish Company, Long’s Meat Market and Nicky USA in Portland. And as a chef, Zenk says he finds higher quality in meals made from products purchased from local farmers.

Buying local food allows Provisions to have a “real connection with where those ingredients are grown, to get to know the farmers and to have a real dialogue with them. It’s just so much more direct and fresher than if you’re using a middleman.”

The back of the shop still features prepared foods, tea, coffee, house-made pizza, ice cream and pastries, along with other options to sit down and eat or grab and go.

“We try to bring as much produce in from farmers as possible,” Shane Tracey, Provisions Market Hall pastry chef, says. “When we are designing desserts for the case, and the ice creams, and designing desserts for the restaurant, everything is seasonally based because that’s the philosophy. That’s what we work from, and everything that we do is based on that.”

In a broader sense, Zenk explains that he sees an overall benefit to the community by supporting local farms and providing farm-to-table products.

“We’re supporting these little farms that are protective of the environment,” he says. “They are growing organic food, and so when we are giving them support, that just helps to foster more farms, hopefully.”

He continues, “I think if you’ve been around for awhile, you’ve noticed a growth at the Saturday Farmers Market. I like to think that a lot of that was helped along by places like Marché and that we’re being very supportive of local agriculture.” ■

Portable Sushi Roll

TRENDY SUSHI BURRITOS IN SPRINGFIELD AND EUGENE BY AMY SCHNEIDER

What do you call a giant sushi roll? A sushi burrito, of course.

“It really just made itself,” says Toby Helms, owner of Unami Sushi and Asian Grill in Springfield. “It doesn’t have a tortilla or anything like that — it’s just a large roll, with our sushi ingredients.”

Unami’s sushi burritos run the gamut of flavors — its “California” burrito ($9.95) is simple and based on a classic California roll, with rice, surimi crab, cream cheese, carrots and avocado, all wrapped in a sizeable sheet of seaweed. The “Samurai” burrito ($16.49) is packed with ingredients, including fresh salmon, yellowtail, yellow fin tuna, avocado, panko green onion and ginger pickled red cabbage.

Each burrito comes with a paired housemade dipping sauce, including a sweet soy reduction and a flavorful garlic sauce, all created with a gooey consistency that makes for easy dipping or drizzling over the burrito.

“There’s a need for quick-service sushi that isn’t conveyor-belt style, and the only way that makes sense is to get people to order just one item, because it takes forever to make a bunch of different items,” Helms says, adding that he and his team came up with the sushi burrito concept shortly after opening Unami Sushi in 2013.

The sushi burrito is taking off in California — from L.A. to San Francisco, Californians are munching logs of tasty sushi — but Helms appears to be the only local sushi maker delving into the concept.

Helms is no newbie to the food business. When he was 15, he started working at restaurants in Montana, holding down two jobs and rotating through various cuisines so that he could learn as much as possible.

At age 23, he and a business partner opened 2nd Street Sushi in Hamilton, Montana.

“It was a fine-dining type of sushi restaurant,” Helms explains. “We had 12 tables, and we did seven-course wine and saki pairing dinners. It was like a test kitchen where I could make up as many recipes as I wanted, and that’s where I honed my skills a bit.”

In 2013, Helms sold the restaurant to his business partner and moved to Lane County. He owns Unami Sushi and the six-month-old Subo Sushi Burritos food cart in the Whiteaker neighborhood, and he says he hopes to open more locations in the near future.

“The goal is to serve high-quality sushi that is made to order but is also quick service,” Helms says.

He sources his ingredients from True World Foods, he says, which offers local produce whenever possible, including albacore tuna and crab from the Oregon coast.

Unami offers a wide variety of regular sushi rolls in addition to its sushi burritos, all concocted by Helms and his chefs. While the Whiteaker location doesn’t serve sushi rolls, it does make sushi nachos and sushi rice bowls for the adventurous in spirit and appetite.

Still, it’s hard to beat the convenience of the sushi burrito. They don’t fall apart when eaten, and the blend of flavors makes for a unique and satisfying meal. ■

Unami Sushi and Asian Grill is open 11 am to 8 pm Monday through Saturday at 4205 Main Street in Springfield. Subo Sushi Burritos is open noon to 7 pm Tuesday through Saturday except Friday, when it’s open until 8 pm, at 3rd Avenue & Van Buren Street. See Facebook for more info.

Burgers with a Twist

NORTHWEST BURGERS OFFERS LOCAL MEAT AND VEGAN OPTIONS BY MOHAMMED ALKHADHER

Born and raised in Eugene, NorthWest Burgers owner and chef Garrett Kirsch says he knows what Eugeneans want: “They want local, house-made products. I wanted to take something as simple as a burger and see how it goes.”

NorthWest Burgers, tucked away in the upstairs of 5th Street Public Market, puts a homemade twist on typically mass-produced “All-American” food.

“I feel like that’s what separates us from other places,” Kirsch says. “I think a lot of people just use pre-made patties — frozen patties that aren’t cooked well. I wanted to do a burger joint unlike what anyone else is doing in town.”

Kirsch and his wife, Felicia, met in culinary school and opened their restaurant almost a year and a half ago in the Fifth Street food court. “We put a lot of love into it,” he says. “We’re here every single morning.”

The menu at NorthWest Burgers displays a dedication to creative burger options, as well as vegetarian and vegan fare. The vegan burger boasts fresh mushrooms, yellow onion and spinach with tempura, and the beer-battered asparagus casts veggies in a whole new light.

Still, NorthWest Burgers is a burger joint, and meat weighs heavily on the menu in a pleasing variety of choices: BBQ chicken, salmon and “bork,” a blend of beef and pork mixed with bacon and blue cheese, all round out the more typical burger selections.

The meat is never frozen, Kirsch says. They buy it fresh and grind it the same day, and the Kirsches makes all of their dressings themselves. “We make every sauce, from ketchup to mustard,” Kirsch says. “If we’re not able to make it ourselves, we outsource to local companies.”

The tangy freshness of the ketchup is novel, replete with seeds and tomato peel, and the homemade ranch outclasses anything you could find in a plastic bottle.

The Kirsches rely on local businesses, including bakery

Reality Kitchen, for their buns. And while the fries may be one of the only things on the menu grown out of state (Idaho, of course), the spuds that come with the burgers are both crunchy and delicious.

The space, nestled in the food court of 5th Street Public Market, has all the options of a contemporary mall food court but subverts the norm with fresh, local food. It’s one way to marry the old with the new, while remaining true to sustainable ideals. ■

NorthWest Burgers is open 11 am to 7 pm Monday through Friday, 8:30 am to 7 pm Saturday and 8:30 am to 5 pm Sunday at 296 E. 5th Ave. #300 in 5th Street Public Market. Learn more at nwburgers.com.

The Boba Bandwagon

BUBBLE TEA AND SNACKS AT D.I.Y. TEA & BEYOND BY RACHAEL CARNES

Once unheard of, boba tea, or bubble tea, features chewy tapioca, or "boba" balls that patrons slurp down with a wide straw, along with a milky iced tea.

"It started in Taiwan in the 1980s," says D.I.Y. Tea & Beyond owner Richard Zheng. "Now it's all over the world."

Zheng says his shop's boba tea is a standout because of its brewing process, using a tea espresso machine, and the way they prepare the addictive little boba balls themselves:

"We call it 'brown sugar taste,'" Zheng says, describing how the Boba balls at D.I.Y. are dredged in sweetness for a particularly rich, nutty taste.

Zheng came to the U.S. from mainland China to go to college in New York City at age 19. "I worked on Wall Street for a while, then I quit my job to open a tea shop in L.A.," he says. Fierce competition in California drove Zheng to a quieter community, without so much boba per square inch.

Zheng's cozy space at 13th and Patterson near the UO campus offers tea, coffee and snacks. "Our house milk tea is our biggest seller," he says.

Made with roasted green tea and a blend of milk tea powders, the iced drink is creamy without being cloying.

"Lots of people, they put grass jelly in their drink," Zheng adds.

For the inexperienced, grass jelly is a Jell-O-like treat, dark green-brown in color, which makes a surprisingly tasty addition to any cold or hot beverage. "Some people put it in a drink or as a topping. Or they'll have it as dessert, with a little honey," Zheng says.

For snacks, D.I.Y. offers homemade popcorn chicken, flavored with salt and pepper and special spices. "It's hand-marinated and prepped fresh," Zheng says.

Other offerings include sweet-butter toast, made from locally sourced milk bread and topped with chocolate, cream and sweet butter.

"I went to every Asian grocery store in town and no one had this bread. So finally I asked a local Japanese restaurant [Kamitori Masa] to bake it for me."

Zheng is thinking big and hopes to franchise his concept as it gains traction. But in the meantime, he's hoping folks might try something new.

"This tea is very popular right now," Zheng says. "A lot of Chinese students, they know this kind of stuff, and more Americans are coming here every day, too." ■

D.I.Y. Tea & Beyond is open 11 am to 11 pm Monday through Friday, and 1 to 11 pm on Saturdays, at 1290 Patterson Street. See the restaurant's Facebook page for more info.

PIZZA FROM FALLING SKY

EMU Rises Again

EUGENE AND PORTLAND RESTAURANTS SET UP SHOP AT THE UNIVERSITY OF OREGON BY VANESSA SALVIA

For more than 60 years, the University of Oregon's Erb Memorial Union has anchored campus, serving as a study hall, food court, meeting place and event space for generations of students. The building was constructed in three phases between 1950 and 1973, and although parts of it are architecturally valuable and are being preserved, the building overall no longer seemed suitable for today's students.

With the $95 million EMU expansion and renovation project nearly completed, the building is set to serve more generations of students as local and regional food vendors set up shop in the approximately 80,000 square feet of new space.

"In the upstairs area we have some of the national chains, but it was important to us that we also had a good local vibe happening," says Dan Geiger, the EMU's assistant director for communications and retail services.

Phase one of the food court opening includes Starbucks, Panda Express and Subway along with Portland chain Joe's Burgers.

Phase two, which should commence in June, includes the official opening of Chipotle along with Townshend's Tea House and a new pizzeria and pub concept from Falling Sky, a brewery with two locations in Eugene. At the time that Geiger spoke with EW, he mentioned another local food vendor that would likely move in but was unconfirmed, so thus far the tenant remains a mystery.

Rob Cohen, owner of Falling Sky, says the opportunity to open in the student union was too exciting to pass up. Students and faculty that were polled about what food options they wanted overwhelmingly said pizza and repeatedly named Falling Sky.

"We got a request for a proposal and we thought we would be a very good fit for it, and so we put together a plan and they chose us," Cohen says. "I think we fit well. They wanted a brewery and they wanted some farm-to-table seasonal food, and that's our niche."

Cohen says the pizzeria will be similar in scale to their other two locations in Eugene, with full service and menu items such as chicken parmesan, corned beef and meatballs.

Many locals still mourn the June 2014 closing of the campus location of Holy Cow, which served healthy, fresh vegetarian and vegan food, and Cohen says he hopes his menu helps make up for that. "We wanted healthy food for the Holy Cow contingent, because that was a big loss to the campus community, so it'll be guilty pleasures with some healthy foods," he says. "But the centerpiece of what we're going to do is sliced pizza or half slice and salad, with several salads to choose from."

With Falling Sky offering a pub, Geiger says he hopes that students and faculty will enjoy a safe, closely monitored, on-campus location to consume alcohol. One goal is to "reduce the number of students traveling to off-campus locations and back at night," he says. "Falling Sky's approach is to offer a high-quality local product, as opposed to discounted cheap beer in a quantity that is sometimes featured in other locations."

For the teetotalers, the campus Townshend's Tea Co. location will invite people to study late into the night. Townshend's is based in Portland but has a Eugene shop. "People love to go to coffee shops to study," says Jake Gano, Townshend's VP of operations, "but you don't always want coffee, especially at night. We've always had a lot of students come to our downtown Eugene location, so now we will be a lot closer for them."

Joe's Burgers, which opened in February, got its start in Tigard's Bridgeport Village in 2010. Their burger-and-shake concept is a hit with the student crowd because, although nothing is made until the order is taken, wait times are minimal.

"We're not the artisanal-style burger with goat cheese and arugula and a brioche bun that you might think of as a Portland burger," says Joe's Burgers marketing manager Kiki Hanover. "We're just an all-American, really good no-fuss burger. We have a great veggie burger, gluten-free buns, and a vegan and gluten-free veggie chili on our menu ... something for everyone."

Produce is locally sourced, meat comes from Portland's SP Provisions and all packaging is recyclable.

So far, the new EMU space seems to be a hit. Dan Geiger says the food vendors now open have been consistently busy, and everyone is happy to be there. He says students today want more sophisticated food choices and want to try new things.

"If they're used to a Starbucks in their home town and there's a local option here, that might eventually get them to try local coffee or tea and more exotic tastes and flavors that they are not familiar with," he says. "I'm just so pleased to have Townshend's, Falling Sky and Joe's Burgers here. This is a great new concept that I think is going to hit it off well." ■

AN ASSORTMENT OF CRAZY CURRY'S
CURRIES AND SAUCES

Curry and Spice

CRAZY CURRY IS A LITTLE FOOD STAND WITH A LOT OF FLAVOR BY BEN RICKER

Padma Prakash worked as a prep cook at the Oregon Electric Station for more than three decades, she says. It was a hard pill to swallow when management changed in 2014 and slashed her pay.

Unsure what else to do, Padma Prakash—with help from her youngest son, Jayant Prakash—opened Crazy Curry, the bright yellow Indo-Fijian food cart on the lonely corner of River Road & Thomas Lane.

“I’ve eaten a lot of Indian and Fijian food,” Jayant Prakash says. “Nothing compares to my mom’s cooking.”

Across the street from a run-down smut shop and surrounded by a sea of broken-down cars, Crazy Curry keeps things simple, offering only a small handful of dishes Padma Prakash learned watching her father cook when she was a little girl growing up in Suva, Fiji’s capital city.

“We’re Lane County’s first and only Indian-Fijian place,” Jayant Prakash says. “We’ve got a good head start.”

The location is a little odd, Jayant Prakash admits, but it hasn’t kept customers away. Their loyal following seems to grow steadily each week. As word spreads, Padma and Jayant Prakash struggle to stay a step ahead of ever-increasing demand.

Dressed in habañero curry mayonnaise and tucked inside toasty naan, the lamb wrap is their most popular item. Rich in flavor and balanced with crispy vegetables, customers who order the lamb are instantly hooked, Jayant Prakash says.

Even after recently doubling their order of Australian grass-fed lamb, Padma and Jayant still tend run out by early afternoon.

Aside from its location, the only thing that feels out of place is Crazy Curry’s name; Padma Prakash’s recipes aren’t “crazy” spicy but perfectly seasoned every time to complement the flavors of her fresh ingredients.

Padma Prakash’s overachieving vegetarian curry, for example, shows off a wider variety of veggies in one bite than what you’ll find on most Indian buffet lines. Carrots, bell peppers, green beans, onions, zucchini, mushroom, cabbage and loads of garlic: all grilled perfectly to accentuate the natural flavors and keep textures crisp.

The key to it all, Padma Prakash says, is the dark masala she imports directly from Fiji. The masalas for sale on grocery store shelves in Eugene, she says, don’t hold a candle to the real thing.

What’s more, Fijian recipes don’t call for dairy, Padma Prakash says. As a result, the plates on Crazy Curry’s menu taste brighter and healthier than most westernized Indian food.

Padma Prakash says she feels a sense of fulfillment seeing customers enjoy Fijian food for the first time.

“People can’t get this food anywhere else,” Jayant Prakash adds. ■

Crazy Curry is open from 11:30 am to 3 pm Tuesday to Saturday at 102 Thomason Lane. For more information, see icravecrazycurry.com

Catch the Tradewinds

MEDITERRANEAN INSPIRATION IN SPRINGFIELD BY RACHAEL CARNES

Tradewinds Café & Catering Company co-owner Abbie Shadrick is on a mission to provide tasty, nutritious, Middle Eastern-inspired food on what used to be the site of a quiet, empty church at 4th and A Street in downtown Springfield.

“We’re part of the restaurant incubator program here at Sprout!,” Shadrick says, gesturing around the welcoming space where diners are feasting on Tradewinds’ signature dishes, along with fare from neighboring restaurants, all housed in a cheerful, open dining room with high steel tables and plenty of light.

“Sprout! provides space,” Shadrick says. “And they’re creating a curriculum to help start-up restaurants go from a café-food court setting to their own brick-and-mortar space.”

Since opening in January 2015, Shadrick says, it’s been helpful to be in the company of other growing businesses, including a Latin American eatery and a German café.

“From serving to learning new techniques, it’s been a collaborative experience,” she says.

Featuring restaurants like Shadrick’s, small businesses, classes and community events, business incubator Sprout! is owned by NEDCO, a nonprofit organization that helps neighborhoods and families build assets through home ownership, neighborhood revitalization and business development.

The first restaurant to jump on the bandwagon, Tradewinds offers a mostly Mediterranean menu, from pitas and pizzas to little plates and salads, with options for other flavor and spice combinations that strike the fancy of Shadrick and her partner, Mark Head.

“We’ve taken the Silk Route as inspiration,” Shadrick says.

Shadrick got her start creating recipes and cooking for nonprofits like Food Not Bombs and homeless shelters in and around town.

And after serving at festivals and developing a retail presence for their hummus and spanakopita at Friendly Street Market and Capella Market, Shadrick and Head decided the time was right to launch a business.

The beginning was a little rough. “There were days when we didn’t serve one customer, the whole darn day,” Shadrick says.

Retail kept them afloat, and now the café is full of diners ready for a tasty little departure to warmer, spicier climes — that yummy nexus between East and West.

Signature dishes, such as a creamy gorgonzola and walnut wonton, offer just the right balance between savory and sweet, a decadent and satisfying morsel, fresh with crunch and especially divine when dipped in house-made pear butter.

The café’s falafel, humble chickpeas and special spices, fried to a golden brown, are light and airy, irresistibly moist and delicious. With accompanying tahini, tzatziki and spicy red pepper sauce, they’re the perfect antidotes to the gray wet of an Oregon spring.

Shadrick benefits from Sprout!’s Friday afternoon farmers market, she says, which operates year round. Tradewinds regularly features local produce in daily specials and on the tasting menu for the café’s monthly supper club.

“When we make our food, we honor the traditions that are there, and we try to stick to the ingredients, making them the freshest possible,” Shadrick says. “Everything is made in house with our loving hands.” ■

Tradewinds Café is open 11am to 9 pm Tuesday through Saturday at 418 A Street in Springfield. A full menu is available on the restaurant’s Facebook page.

WHY?

It's about
REAL FOOD.

It's fresh produce from our region's best
LOCAL FARMS.

Because it
TASTES BETTER.

It's meat from ranchers who do things
THE RIGHT WAY.

It's seafood from our amazing Northwest Coast that's SUPER FRESH.

It's delightful groceries that are RARE & SPECIAL.

It's supporting organic agriculture that's SUSTAINABLE.

And it's about...
SLOWING DOWN.

Because eating food, shopping for food, and cooking food should be FUN & INSPIRING.
